

Tick (✓) its just as simple as that

One- collect your luggage

Two, -to the Red lane if you have declared quarantine items

Three-To the green lane if you have nothing to declare

The speed and popularity of air travel has increased the chances of spreading pests and diseases from other countries into Samoa. These pests and diseases may be hitchhiking on goods that one is bringing into Samoa. Quarantine officials at Faleolo airport have noticed an increase of non conformance in the past two months. These passengers have either incomplete documentations or no documentations at all for these regulated articles such as meat, fruits, vegetables and cut flowers to name a few. Most surprisingly some want to get away by making false declarations.

“We will work together as a team with other agencies for the benefit and safety of our country.”

Credit is given to the watchful and keen eyes of the inspectors and X-ray machine at the Arrival Terminal Building. These offenders were warned and the goods were seized for destruction. SQS reminds travelers that it is an offense to provide insufficient information or information that is misleading or untrue. Please ensure that you declare all Quarantinable goods on the arrival card and if in doubt ask the Quarantine inspectors because that tick counts.

Staff Corner.

It's a new year and SQS staff are ready to face yet another challenge. This time on the sports ground. The staff looks forward to every Friday for the rugby touch session after work. Keeping the body fit is an important aspect of an inspectors life. It helps maintain the fitness level as SQS is an essential service and all its staff members should be fit and active to attend to any matter that arises anytime and anywhere that requires Quarantine expertise.
